This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
February 27th, 1823.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives the 8th of May, 1822, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pare and lay before the House, "as early in the next session, as may practicable, a statement, shewing the amount of money which apars to have stood to the credit of the United States, or its Treasur, in every bank in which the public money has been deposited, at e end of each quarter, since the first day of January 1817, distinishing between special and general deposites; a particular and inute account of each transfer of the public money from one bank another, which has been made within the aforesaid period, and the asons and motives for making the same; a detailed account of the ecial deposites that have been made in any of the banks; the time hen made; the description of the notes so deposited, and the reason r making the same; together with any contract or contracts, under hich those deposites were made; the precise amount, and an exact scription of the unavailable funds of the Treasury; what part ereof was unavailable at the time of deposite; how long any part ereof remained on deposite before it became unavailable, and why became so; showing the respective accounts and relations of the nited States with each bank, together with all correspondence in session of the Department with each of these banks, in relation any of the foregoing subjects;" I have the honor to submit statemts, prepared in obedience to the resolution, numbered from one to ne, inclusive.

No. 1 embraces "the amount of money which appears to have stood the credit of the United States, or its Treasurer, in every bank which the public money has been deposited, at the end of each arter, since the 1st day of January, 1817, distinguishing between cial and general deposites."

No. 2 contains "a particular and minute account of each transfer the public money from one bank to another, which has been made thin the aforesaid period."

No. 3 contains "a detailed account of the special deposites that re been made in any of the banks, and the time when made."

No. 4 contains the precise amount, and as exact a description of unavailable funds of the Treasury, as it is practicable to furnish.

No. 5 contains a statement of all the money, at any time in the session of the bank of the United States, which was considered the bank as special deposite.

No. 6 contains an account of the disposition made of the special posite transferred from the bank of the United States to the Bank of lumbia, and of its present situation.

From No. 1, it appears that on the 1st day of January, 1817, the cial deposite in the Treasury amounted to $3,031,459 36; and m No. 5, it appears that the whole amount of special deposites which came into the possession of the bank of the United States, was $3,278,710 98; of which sum, $2,665,409 61 were assumed by the bank, and accounted for in specie.

It is impracticable to furnish a description of the notes, which then constituted the special deposite, as the credits entered upon the books of the bank only shew the amount credited, and not the description of the notes deposited.

Transfers of the public money from one bank to another, have generally been exclusively made with a view to facilitate the public expenditure. The only exceptions to this rule which have occurred, are, 1st, the sum of $30,000, special deposite, transferred from the bank of Muskingum to the Belmont Bank of St. Clairsville, upon conditions set forth in my letter of the 3d March, 1817. This transaction was founded upon the belief that the interest of the Treasury would be subserved, as in fact it was; the Belmont bank having paid the amount to the bank of the United States in the first quarter of 1818. 2ndly, a deposite of $75,000, in March, 1817, in the Farmers and Mechanics' bank of Georgetown; the following deposites, made in the 1st, 2nd, and 3d quarters of 1819, in certain banks, in the district of Columbia, viz: in the Union bank of Alexandria, $30,000; in the Mechanics' do. $57,000; in the Franklin bank do. $48,000; in the bank of Washington, $32,000; in the Patriotic bank, $10,000; in the Central bank of Georgetown and Washington, $40,000; in the Union bank of Georgetown, $25,000; and in the bank of Columbia, $45,000; all of which deposites appear in statements Nos. 1 and 2. These deposites were made, as well with a view to transfer funds from places where they were not required to this District, where the expenditures always greatly exceed the revenue, as to aid the banks, which were then much pressed by demands upon them for specie, from the Eastward, and from the return of their notes from the western parts of Virginia, where banks, chartered by that state, had just gone into operation, or were collecting specie preparatory to that event. The reasons upon which these deposites, with the exception of the first, were made, are more fully explained in a report made to the Congress, on the 10th day of December, 1817, and in a report to the Senate of the United States, on the 25th instant; copies of which are herewith communicated.

Deposites made in bank, other than those effected by transfers from one bank to another, are of the following descriptions: 1st, those made by the Revenue Officers, and Receivers of the Land Offices, in conformity with the general instructions of the Department. 2d, by Disbursing Officers, having remittances to make to different places. In all such cases, upon making a deposite in bank, to the credit of the Treasurer, a draft is furnished upon a bank of deposite in the place to which the remittance is to be made, or upon one most convenient to it. 3d, by officers, or individuals, indebted to the government. 4th, by individuals who are desirous of remitting small sums of money to places where there is public money on deposite. In all cases of this kind, the interest of the Treasury is consulted, by giving drafts only upon places whence it is necessary to transfer a portion of the public funds.

No contracts have been made with banks, except those which were communicated to the House of Representatives, on the 14th day of February, 1822, and which have been printed among the public documents, unless the transaction with the Belmont bank of St. Clairsville is considered a contract. Copies of the correspondence connected with it are transmitted.

Before I left the city in July last, for the benefit of my health, I addressed a letter to the President of the Bank of the United States, requesting a statement of the special deposite which had been in the possession of the bank, and, upon my departure, left directions that the statements should be prepared, and the correspondence copied, in order that the report might be made as early as practicable; but the clerk to whom the directions were given, having formed a mistaken idea of the extent of the call for the correspondence with the banks, copies were not prepared, and it has been found impracticable to prepare them so as to be communicated with this report. They are extremely voluminous, my letters to the banks alone filling between five and six hundred folio pages, and will require much time and labor; but they shall be prepared and transmitted to the House, at the commencement of the next session of Congress. The statements which are submitted have been prepared with great labor; and although every exertion has been made, they were not completed until the 19th instant.

I remain, with respect,
Your most obedient servant,
W. H. CRAWFORD.

Hon. P. P. Barbour,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
June 22, 1822.

SIR: In order to facilitate the collection of information necessary to enable me to comply with a resolution of the House of Representatives, I will thank you to cause to be transmitted to me a statement of the special deposite which was at the credit of the Treasurer in the Bank of the United States and its offices, from the commencement of the special deposite account, to the time when that deposite was transferred to the Bank of Columbia.

The words of that part of the resolution for which this information is wanted, are these: "a detailed account of the special deposites that have been made in any of the banks, the time when made, the description of notes so deposited, and the reason for making the same;" and you will be pleased to direct that all the facts called for by the resolution may be stated, as far as they may be within the knowledge of the bank.

The statement should include not only those deposites that were special at the time they were made, but those that became unavailable subsequently—the resolution calling further for "the precise amount and an exact description of the unavailable funds of the Treasury, what part thereof was unavailable at the time of deposite, how long any part thereof remained on deposite before it became unavailable, and why it became so."

I remain, with respect,
Your most obedient servant,
WM. H. CRAWFORD.

LANGDON CHEVES, Esq.
President of the Bank United States.

No. 5—(B.)

SIR: Your letter of the 22d June last, which I had the honor to acknowledge on the 1st July last, has since been the subject of attentive consideration, and I have now the honor to enclose you a statement of "the special deposites received on account of the Treasurer of the United States at the Bank United States, a copy of which was furnished to the committee of Congress, 28th December, 1818." This statement contains all the information within the knowledge of the Bank.

I have the honor to be, &c.
L. CHEVES, President.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
January 14, 1818.

SIR: I have instructed the Treasurer of the United States to draw on the Belmont Bank of St. Clairsville, at the expiration of sixty days, in favor of the Bank of the United States, for the thirty thousand dollars due by the Belmont Bank to the United States; and I have requested the Cashier of the Bank of Muskingum, on your producing to him evidence that the same is paid, to deliver up to you the securities which you deposited with him for the payment of that debt.

The length of time which I have suffered this money to remain in the Belmont Bank, while it presents evidence of my desire to afford all the accommodation consistent with my duty, will, I trust, be an inducement with the bank for the prompt and satisfactory discharge of the draft.

I am, &c.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

J. CALDWELL, Esq.
President of the Belmont Bank of St. Clairsville.

No. 8.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
December 10, 1817.

SIR: By the sixteenth section of the charter of the Bank of the United States, the deposites of the public money are required to be made in the Bank, and its offices, in the places where they may be established, unless the Secretary of the Treasury shall, at any time, otherwise order and direct; in which case, the reasons of such order and direction shall be laid before Congress, if in session, and if not in session, immediately after the commencement of the next session.

The Bank itself, and its offices established at Boston, New York, Baltimore, and this city, commenced their operations at different periods between the 1st day of January, 1817, and the 4th day of March, ensuing.

If the provisions of the section already stated, did not impose the obligation to transfer to the Bank of the United States, and to its offices, the public deposites which had previously been made in the state and local banks, no deposite, during this interval, was made which required the reasons upon which it was directed to be communicated to Congress.

Without inquiring, in this place, whether, under the charter, the Bank of the United States had a right to such a transfer, I feel it my duty to state that, previous to the 1st day of January, 1817, a proposition had been submitted, by this Department, to the state and other local Banks, for the purpose of inducing them to resume specie payments, on the 20th day of February following. As the public money deposited in them was intimately connected with the proposition, it was deemed inexpedient to transfer those balances to the Bank of the United States, until the result of the proposition was known.

Nearly contemporaneous with this event, an arrangement was made between the Bank of the United States, and the state Banks in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Richmond, by which the deposites were to be transferred from the State Banks embraced by the arrangement, to the Bank of the United States, and to its offices, on the 20th day of February, in that year. This arrangement was sanctioned by the Treasury Department, and was substantially executed by the parties.

As the conditions imposed, by this arrangement, upon the Bank of the United States, were not extended to any other state or local banks, than those which were parties to it, in order to induce the banks in this District to resume specie payments, simultaneously with the banks already enumerated, it became necessary for the Treasury Department to give them assurances of support during the first months succeeding such resumption.

In consequence of this assurance, a considerable portion of the deposites in the banks of Washington and Georgetown were permitted to remain until the 1st day of July last. On the 15th day of March, of the same year, a deposite of $75,000 was made in the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown, which had not previously been one of the depositories of the public money; which sum was transferred to the Bank of the United States, at the time that the deposites which had been been previously made in the Banks of Washington and Georgetown were transferred.

In the states south of this place, the deposites were transferred from the State Banks to the Offices of the Bank of the United States, at the several periods of their commencing their operations.

Shortly after the Office at Boston went into operation, a considerable portion of the public money deposited in the State Bank was transferred, and paid in specie by that Bank. Upon the urgent representations of the State Bank, the remainder was assigned for the discharge of the Treasury Notes which had been made payable at that place. Such portion of the sum set apart for that object as remained unexpended on the first day of July, was directed to be paid to the Office established at Boston.

Previous to the close of the year 1816, a considerable sum had been deposited in the Bank of Pennsylvania, to the credit of the Commissioner of Loans of the state of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of discharging the Treasury Notes which had been made payable at Philadelphia. When the duties of Commissioner of Loans were transferred to the Bank of the United States, on the first day of July last, a considerable balance of that amount remained unexpended.

It was, however, represented by the Bank of Pennsylvania, that Treasury Notes were daily presented to it for payment, and that a transfer of the funds assigned to that object, would be inconvenient to the holders. It was, thereupon, determined to continue to employ that Bank as the agent of the Treasury for discharging the outstanding Treasury Notes, demandable at Philadelphia, until the first day of October last, when the unexpended balance was directed to be transferred to the Bank of the United States.

By the regulations of the Bank of the United States, its offices were not permitted to receive bills of any state or local banks, except those established in the places where they were respectively tendered in payment. Under this regulation, the bills presented for deposite by the Collector of the District of Columbia, and by several of those of the internal revenue of the states of Virginia and Maryland, to the Office at this place, were refused.

The frequent repayments by officers of the late army, in the final settlements of their accounts at the Treasury, presented a difficulty of the same nature. In order to avoid this inconvenience of special deposites in this city, an arrangement was made with the Bank of the Metropolis, which has received all sums refused by that Office in obedience to those regulations, and credited the Treasurer of the United States with the amount in specie. The sums so paid remain still principally with the Bank. Payments to some extent were, also, on the same principle, made into the Bank of Pennsylvania, for some months after the Bank of the United States was in operation; but the sums so paid have been since transferred to the Bank of the United States.

No other cases have occurred, during the recess of Congress, which are necessary to be presented in this communication.

In declining to transfer the balances which remained in the Banks of this District at the time that the Office in this city commenced business, and in the cases stated to have occurred in Philadelphia and in Boston, I was influenced by a consideration of the pressure felt by the state and local Banks, during several months subsequent to the resumption of specie payments, and of the services rendered to the government by those banks during the period they were used as places of public deposite by the Treasury. An immediate transfer of the public money deposited in them, would probably have produced a pressure upon the debtors of those Banks, which might have inflicted upon them evils greatly beyond the benefit which would have resulted from the measure to the Bank of the United States.

In making the transfers from the State Banks, the special deposites, of which they were, in some instances, principally composed, presented considerable embarrassment. The Bank of the United States tendered its services, for the purpose of exchanging for specie, or bills of the banks in the commercial cities, those deposites which were principally confined to the interior of the middle and western states. This offer was accepted, and, although great exertions were made by the bank to effect that object, much remains to be done. Indeed, the amount of special deposites is now nearly as large as when the agency of the bank was accepted. This has arisen from the immense number of local banks scattered over the interior of the states of Pennsylvania and Ohio, most of which, ostensibly, pay their bills in specie. The paper, however, of these banks, is not received, in most cases, by each other, as specie: and the experience which the Bank of the United States, in the execution of its agency, has acquired of the character and standing of many of them, has induced it generally to refuse the bills of those banks. In order to put an end to an evil, which seems rather to increase than diminish, general instructions have been given to the collectors of the internal revenue, to receive the bills of no bank which will not be credited as specie in the Bank of the United States, its offices, and state banks, employed as places of deposite, where they are respectively required to make their deposites. As soon as the offices established at Louisville, Chillicothe, and Pittsburg, have gone into operation, and shall have thrown into circulation a reasonable amount of their bills, they will be made the sole depositories of the public moneys arising from the sales of lands in the states of Ohio, and Indiana, and instructions similar to those already given to the collectors, will be given to the receivers of public money in those states.

It is only after this arrangement shall be effected, that the Bank of the United States will enjoy, in their just extent, the advantages intended to be secured to it, by the charter. Under the limited enjoyment of those advantages, which general circumstances seemed to impose, the conduct of the bank is entitled to high commendation. The directors have, in no instance, urged their claim to an earlier transfer of the public money which remained in the possession of the state or local banks. There is much reason, also, to believe, that, in its intercourse with the state banks, and in the execution of the agency confided to it by this Department, a spirit of justice and liberality has been constantly manifested.

I have the honor to be, &c.

W. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. the President of the Senate; and The Hon. the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

No. 9.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
25th February, 1823.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 29th ult. requesting the Secretary of the Treasury "to inform the Senate if any loans of money to any amount, and for what purpose, have been made from the Treasury, to any individuals, or banking institutions, since the 3d day of March, 1789, and whether such loans, so made, have been repaid, or in any manner adequately secured, so that the government will ultimately be satisfactorily reimbursed," I have the honor to submit copies of letters from the Secretary of the Treasury, from the 19th of March, 1792, to the 17th of July, 1819, inclusive, to the officers of the Bank of the United States, and of its Branches, and to the officers of certain state banks, and to other officers and individuals, which contain the information required by the resolution, as far as it can be collected from the correspondence of the Department.

By reference to the papers numbered from 1 to 11, inclusive, it is apparent that loans in fact, though not in terms, were offered by the Treasury Department to the Bank of the United States, and to the state banks to which they were directed.

By the first of these letters, dated the 19th of March, 1792, the Secretary of the Treasury informed the President of the Bank of the United States that it had been represented to him that an unusually large sum of money had and would become due to the United States from importers in the District of Philadelphia, in the month of March, 1792, and reminded him that, in consequence of standing circular instructions, the collector of the district would receive from the merchants, as cash, the post notes of the Bank of the United States, if not issued for a longer period of payment than thirty days, and that he would judge how far it might be convenient to make operations payable in such notes, which might not be convenient if payable immediately in specie, or cash notes. On the 29th of the same month, a letter was addressed, by the same officer, to the President of the Bank of Maryland, stating that it had been intimated to him that considerable sums of duties had become due, or were to fall due, in Baltimore, in the course of the month, and that it was at all times his wish to give to the merchants as much facility as the public business would admit; that he had, therefore, determined, if he should incline to make discounts for the importers, to enable them to pay the duties due on or before the 15th of April thereafter, he would leave a sum of money, equal thereto, in his hands, for sixty days after the dates of the notes.

By his letters of the 10th of April, 1792, the Presidents of the Bank of the United States, and of the Bank of Maryland, were informed that circumstances, within his knowledge, induced him to state that the operation, suggested in his letter of the 29th of March, conti to be desirable in relation to those who have payments to mak the custom house, in the course of that month. By his letter of 8th of December, 1792, the President of the Bank of the Un States was informed that the Secretary had no objection that no in which the government was interested, should be renewed for thi days, in all cases where it could be done with perfect safety to public. By the letter of the Secretary, of the 5th of Febru 1793, the President of the office of the Bank of the United St at New York was informed that an arrangement had been m with the Bank of the United States, for the accommodatio the merchants of Philadelphia, whose bonds for duties were to come payable between that date and the last day of the ensu month, by which the bank would discount the notes of such m chants as were indebted to the custom house, for thirty days, for respective sums that should become payable; the bank to rece those notes from the collector, as cash, to be drawn for only by collector. The president of the office was informed that, if a simil arrangement appeared to him to be requisite to the accommodati of the merchants of New York, that he would not draw for the su that had relation to the transaction, until about the middle of M thereafter. On the 5th of March, 1793, a similar letter was dressed to the presidents of the offices of discount and deposite Boston and Providence. His letters of the 5th of April, 1793, a the 16th of February, 1797, marked 10, 11, have the same object view; that is to say, they offer, as inducements to the banks to d count the notes of persons indebted upon duty bonds, that the amo of such bonds shall not be drawn from the banks until the notes di counted were payable, or that post notes shall be receivable by collector in discharge of such bonds.

The latter of these letters relates to the case of an individual, in whose favor the Secretary of the Treasury submits to the consideration of the bank, whether an accommodation could not be granted to him, on condition that the sum discounted should be paid in a p note, to be deposited with the collector of the customs. This rep sentation was made in consequence of the individual's being unable obtain a credit at the custom-house on a cargo of coffee, because he had duty bonds to a considerable amount then due. It appears, from the letter of the 23d of February, 1793, already referred to, that a rangements of that nature were made, verbally, with the bank, as the arrangement, referred to in that letter, is not of record in the office.

The correspondence between the Secretary of the Treasury and the banks, generally, does not show upon what account the deposites in those banks were made. The letters of the Secretary to the Treasurer, are still more general, simply directing the deposite.

The accounts of the Treasurer with the banks, anterior to the last quarter of the year 1811, have not been preserved; no inference, therefore, can be drawn from the state of the accounts, as to the object or purpose for which any deposite was made, previously to that date. From the accounts with the banks, from that period, it ap-

hat many deposites were made by transferring public money e bank to another, when the amount in the bank, to which sfer was made, was much more than sufficient to meet the rawn upon it. Although the inferences which may be drawn e state of the accounts between the Treasurer and a bank in leposites are made, apparently not required for the public ex-re, cannot be considered as conclusive evidence that such de-were made to sustain the bank against a run, or press upon it, it in its operations; yet the presumption is sufficiently strong, t proper to present a few of those cases. On the 6th of 1812, a draft was drawn for $50,000, in favor of the Me-
Bank of New York, upon the State Bank at Charleston, the 7th of May, for $80,000. On the 2d of March, there deposite, in the former bank, $432,000, which was not re-low $319,000 during the remainder of the month; and on the May, the deposite was $133,000, which sum was not dimin-uring the month; and at the end of the quarter, it had increas-$24,000. There were drawn, and deposited, in the Bank of ania, the following drafts, viz: 12th March, 1812, upon on Bank of Boston, $50,000; 6th July, upon the State Bank on, $40,000; in October, of the same year, upon the Bank of rk, $200,000; and upon the Manhattan Company, $100,000.
ate of the first draft, there was standing to the credit of the ter, on the books of the Bank, $133,000, which was not di-during the month; and at its close, amounted to $294,000.
of the second, the deposite amounted to $164,000, which increasing, and amounted, on the 17th August, to $403,000; end of the quarter, to $636,000. On the 6th of October, of the first draft, in that month, it amounted to $465,000, close of the month, to $593,000. The records of the of-no explanation of the reasons which induced the Secretary asury to make these transfers; and many others, of a simiwere made, from time to time. But on the 4th of March, Cashier of the Bank of Pennsylvania, by letter of that date, the Secretary of the Treasury, that the great and unpredemands upon that institution for specie, principally from ward, induced him to request, that, if consistent with the in-the government, he would give him drafts either on New Boston, to an amount that would counteract those demands, that the amount of specie in the vaults but little exceeded
, and that the demands of the bank, upon those to the south-
Philadelphia, if called for, might put them to serious incon-. Upon this representation, a draft was, on the 8th of the drawn by the Treasurer, in favor of the bank, for $150,000, e Bank of New York. Upon the 28th of February preced-transaction, there was in the bank a deposite of $755,000, and 31st March, $799,000. By reference to the letter of the Presi-the Bank of Columbia, which accompanies this report, marked it appears, that, on the 29th of October, 1801, the Secretary Treasury made a deposite in that bank of $50,000, to enable it to sustain itself against a run which was then making upon it, a that other sums were subsequently deposited in that bank by the D partment, to aid it in its operations. In the letter of the acting S cretary of the Treasury, of the 27th May, 1813, to Stephen Girar he is informed, that "the arrangement made by Mr. Gallatin, re tive to the deposite of the public moneys drawn from your bank, i favor of the public agents, was to shield you against the attacks c the incorporated banks, to whom such moneys would otherwise ha been transferred; and the magnitude of your contract might th have been rendered highly prejudicial to your institution. It is th particular province, and it has been the practice, of the Departme of the Treasury of the United States, to direct the moneyed operati of the public to the preservation of credit, by maintaining the equil brium between the moneyed institutions of the country; and as it h protected your institution, by the arrangement alluded to, so it wi guard those institutions against any undue pressure which the publi funds in your vaults may enable you to direct against them. I a informed that you have made some very heavy and unnecessar drafts of specie from several banks, particularly from the Pennsyl vania and Farmers and Mechanics' Banks, with indications of disposition to persevere, which has excited considerable apprehension I therefore deem it necessary to inform you, that a continuance of that system will induce the prompt application of a specific remedy."

From my personal intercourse with Mr. Gallatin, I know he en tertained the sentiments communicated in this letter; and I presume they have been entertained by all of his predecessors and successors in office, and acted upon whenever cases occurred which rendered it necessary.

When I entered upon the duties of Secretary of the Treasury, on the 22d October, 1816, the banks in all the states, except those in Massachusetts, had suspended specie payments. My immediate predecessor in office had made an ineffectual attempt, in the course of that year, to induce them to commence specie payments, by discharging in specie all notes not exceeding five dollars. By the charter of the Bank of the United States, it was to go into operation on the 1st of January, 1817. It was, after mature deliberation, determined that another effort should be made by the Treasury Department, to induce the state banks to aid the Bank of the United States, in restoring the currency to a sound state. There was then in the Treasury more than eleven millions of dollars, deposited in the state banks, and the estimate of receipts for the year 1817, considerably exceeded that of the expenditure for the year. It was, therefore, proposed by the Department, that no part of the sums then in the state banks, should be drawn from them before the 1st of July, unless the receipts should not be equal to the expenditure, an event which there was no reason to apprehend, and that after that time it should be gradually drawn, as the public service should require, but in no case were drafts to be drawn in favor of the Bank of the United States, unless it should become necessary to protect it against the state banks. This advantageous proposition was declined without hesitation. The

in the principal Atlantic cities, however, entered into an arment with the Bank of the United States, by which they ento resume specie payments, and in the course of the year 1817, sumption, with but few exceptions, became general throughout nion. Towards the close of the year 1818, some of the banks western states stopped payment. The sudden fall in the price domestic articles, which occurred about the same period, createneral pressure upon the banks. In the winter and spring of the Bank of the United States was, in the opinion of the en-ned officer who presided over its direction, in a great degree ted for the preservation of its credit, to the forbearance of its tors, and to the support which it received from the Treasury rtment. Such were my impressions of its critical state, that it my duty to accept propositions made by the board of direcwhich, under other circumstances would have been declined.
ring this general pressure, the banks in this District, which, the establishment of the office of discount and deposite in the had not taken advantage of that event, to reduce their circula-
, by contracting their discounts, were pressed by continual and sing demands for specie from the eastward, and by the return ir notes upon them from the western parts of Virginia, where n banks, chartered by that state, had commenced, or were pre-g to commence business. Pressed thus, on both sides, their s of meeting the demands made upon them, and of preserving credit, were believed to be insufficient. In this critical situaseveral of them applied, personally, by their directors, to the Denent, to ascertain whether, in case of great emergency, they d receive any support. Considering the crisis as highly im-nt to the nation, and believing that a failure of one or more of banks would produce a general run upon all, of a different na-from that which was then pressing upon them, assurances were
, that a reasonable support might be relied upon.

consequence of this assurance, deposites were, from time to made in the Union Bank of Alexandria, the Mechanics' Bank, he Franklin Bank, of the same place; in the Union and Central s of Georgetown; in the Bank of Washington; and in the Pa-ic Bank. All these sums have been repaid, except the sum of 000 dollars, deposited in the Franklin Bank of Alexandria. The e of the funds of that Bank have been assigned to the United s, and legal measures have been adopted by the Attorney of the ed States, for the recovery of the amount from the debtors of Bank. The letter of that officer, which is herewith communi-l, shows that there is no danger of any loss to the United States.
es of the letters to the Treasurer, directing the deposites to be in that Bank, to his credit, are also communicated. These dees were made upon the representations of General Thompson on, then Collector of the district of Alexandria, and of John T.
tts, Esq. who were both men of great respectability, and con-able stockholders in the Bank, W. T. Swann, Esq. a man of the st character, and of considerably property, was then the President of the Bank. No doubt was entertained of the integrity with which the Bank was administered, and of its capacity, if aided for a short time, of preserving its credit, and of meeting the drafts of the Treasurer for the amount deposited by him to his credit. This anticipation, it is believed, would have been realized, had not the notes of the Bank been so successfully counterfeited, as to have imposed upon its officers to a considerable amount. The same misfortune befel the Central Bank of Georgetown. In the month of May, of the same year, when the Cashier of the Bank of Columbia was about to set out on his journey through the interior of the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Ohio, for the purpose of demanding payment of the special deposite which had been transferred to that Bank, he represented to the Department that he should be at very considerable expense, and that, during his absence, there might be a press made upon the Bank; and, therefore, requested that a deposite of $45,000 might be made in the Bank, to the credit of the Treasurer. As no charge was to be made for the expense and risk which was incurred, in carrying a large amount of bank notes through the country, the request was considered reasonable, and the deposite was accordingly made. This Bank has never ceased to pay its notes in specie, on demand.

These are all the transactions with Banks which are believed to be within the intent or terms of the resolution, except certain transactions with the Banks of this District, in the early part of the year 1817, which were specifically reported to the two Houses of Congress, on the 10th of December, 1817, and printed among the public documents of that session. In tha report, it is stated, that a deposite of $75,000 had been made in the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown, to sustain it in its operations, immediately after resuming specie payments. The principle and practice of the Treasury in sustaining the credit of Banks, disposed to act correctly, was, in this communication, frankly disclosed to Congress, when not the slightest symptom of dissatisfaction was manifested, or the right or propriety of the practice called directly or indirectly in question.

It is presumed that it has not been the practice of the Department to lend the public money to individuals. By reference to letters, numbered from 12 to 16, inclusive, it will be found that public money has been advanced to individuals, which, however, have that appearance; but it is possible that those transactions may admit of explanations, which may take from them that character. From Nos. 14 and 15, it appears, that considerable sums were, in 1798, advanced to Lane and Salter, and others, to enable them to erect the necessary machinery for making cannon, when no contract for that object had been made. The only case which has occurred since I took charge of the Treasury Department, which can have given rise to that part of the resolution is one connected with the public money deposited by the Receiver at Cincinnati in the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of that place.

That bank, a short time after the date of its agreement with the Department, in 1819, stopped payment, and has, when called upon, offered no explanations, or given any reply, to the several letter addressed to it by the Department. When, in the course of that year, Mr. Whann visited Cincinnati, as the agent of the Treasury, to convert the special deposite into current notes or specie, or to obtain acknowledgments that should bear interest, he reported that all the banks upon which he called, with the exception of the Farmers and Mechanics', had shewn a disposition to act fairly—had exposed to him the state of their affairs, and given him such explanations as were satisfactory; but that the officers of that bank had refused to expose the state of its affairs, or give explanations of any kind. It also refused to give any receipt or acknowledgment of the amount which had been deposited in it. No return has yet been made by the bank to the Treasurer, or to this office, stating the amount in its possession. These circumstances had produced a most unfavorable impression, not only as to the integrity with which the bank was directed, but also as to its solvency. In the spring of 1820, Colonel Johnson, of the Senate, as the agent of his brother, applied to the Department to ascertain whether, upon his transferring notes to the United States, upon persons in good credit, in this place, a credit would be given to his brother for the amount with the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank. Believing, as I did, from the circumstances which have been stated, that the debt due by the bank was not safe, and that notes upon solvent persons in this place afforded a more certain prospect of receiving payment than from the bank, the offer was accepted, and notes, to the amount of $30,583 24, a considerable proportion of which were secured by mortgage, were deposited in the Branch of the United States Bank in this place, and a credit for the amount given to Col. James Johnson on the Bank at Cincinnati. The transaction, however, was never considered as a loan of money. It was, in fact, changing one debt for another, and receiving, as it was then; and still is believed, a better security for it than what was given in exchange. Subsequent reflection, however, upon the subject, excited doubts whether the responsibility of changing the nature of any debt due to the United States, except by taking collateral or additional security, ought to be incurred by the Department. An application of a similar kind, made subsequently, by the same gentleman, was accordingly declined.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

W. H. CRAWFORD.

Hon. JOHN GAILLARD,
President, pro tempore, of the Senate.
